PREFACE

The edition of 1998 differs from that one of 1993 in how much has been added of the references and has been corrected some graphical errors. The reader will notice two types of references. The "technical References" are typically those of university or level of diploma of science and engineering. The "References" do not demand no cultural formation.

The previous investigators of the financial markets have uncovered pieces of the puzzle behind the activity of the financial market. However, or these pieces have not put together all, or chose not to introduce their acquaintance to the public. Since these investigators made of the contributions that they must be recognized.

E' INTENTION Of The LONG AUTHOR ALL THIS COURSE TO PREVIOUSLY CREDIT WHICHEVER MATERIAL THAT E' BE INTRODUCED FROM An OTHER AUTHOR.

With this course two books are supplied. first book contains written text describing the diagrams, that they are contained in according to book. The two books allow to the reader of having the diagrams and the description of forehead to it in the same moment without to behind jump ahead and in the book trying the diagrams.

For the reader it is necessary to hold the diagram under study of forehead to it. Without a reference to the diagrams the written text will have sense little.

Even if the concepts introduce to you in this course are not difficult, entire will not be comprised with one simple reading. It is such a new approach to the market analysis that it demands a little practical in order fixing the thought in such way to comprise totally what it is introduced. One recommends the reader to fly over on the information that initially finds sviante. When rileggerà the course will be seen many things that they were not understood during first or the second time.
